

ADVICE FOR 2024 GRIFFITH UNIVERSITY STUDENTS

Each year we send a survey to the students in their first year of study in Australia and New Zealand. We ask about their university, program, life Down Under, accommodation, and activities outside of the classroom.

Keep reading to get all the insider tips taken directly from the survey for a smooth transition to studying at Griffith University!

COMMENTS & ADVICE ABOUT GRIFFITH

Program	Why do you like and what do you dislike about your university?	Why do you like and what do you dislike about your program?	What advice do you have for future Canadian or American students coming into this program and university?
Dentistry	I like that they accepted me! Also, the campus is great, and they are very lenient with extending credit for prior study. My only beef is with some certain professors, and I'm pretty sure everyone has a similar experience!	I like that we get started learning relevant materials right away. I wish we would practice hand skills more in the first year though.	Choose this one!
Dentistry	Some things I like are the fact that the campus is multicultural and has a variety of clubs to join. I dislike the fact that there are so many magpies near the university that swoop so close to me.	I like that the dental building was recently renovated, the small class sizes and close-knit environment within our cohort. I like the instructors as well, who are very professional and informative.	Make connections with upper year students!
Dentistry	I like the services on campus and student support. I dislike that some areas on campus look old.	The class size is good, and we get to ask 1 on 1 questions with instructors. The teaching methods are also effective, with online lectures and weekly labs. I	Enjoy your time on the Gold Coast, but make sure to study well too.

dislike that the haptics sessions are only 4 times a year, as they were quite helpful.

Dentistry

As a student at Griffith University's Gold Coast campus dental school, there are certain aspects that I enjoy as well as some that aren't the best.

I love the high-quality education and training provided at Griffith University's dental school. The comprehensive curriculum and experienced faculty contribute to a strong academic foundation, especially with cadavers in my anatomical and dental clinics.

2. Modern Facilities: The state-of-the-art dental facilities and well-equipped clinics offer an excellent learning environment. Having access to the latest technology and equipment is a significant advantage.

3. Research Opportunities: If the university encourages and supports dental research, I would appreciate the opportunity to engage in meaningful research projects, contributing to the field's advancement.

I love the class sizes as everyone can get to know each other. I also love how connected all the years are connected to each other. I dislike that some clinicians are not open to allowing students to shadow procedures as that is quite important.

Get ready ASAP! Have all your documents, checklists, finances, and exploit all resources that you honestly can!

Research the Program Thoroughly: Before committing, thoroughly research the dental program, its curriculum, faculty, and reputation. Ensure it aligns with your academic and career goals.
Financial Planning: Plan your finances carefully. Consider tuition fees, living costs, and any potential scholarships or financial aid. Create a budget and explore part-time job opportunities if necessary.
Student Visa and Documentation: Understand the student visa application process for Australia and gather all required documents well in advance. Make sure your passport is valid throughout your stay.

Accommodation: Start looking for accommodation early, and explore various options, from on-campus housing to off-campus rentals. Consider proximity to campus and your budget.
Health Insurance: Ensure you have appropriate health insurance coverage while studying in Australia. Most

4. Campus and Location: The Gold Coast's beautiful surroundings and pleasant climate would likely be a plus. Access to beaches and outdoor activities could enhance the overall student experience.

Dislikes:

1. Tuition Costs: Like many international students, I might be concerned about the relatively high tuition fees for international students in Australia.

2. Accommodation Expenses: Depending on the location, finding affordable and suitable accommodation can be a challenge. High living costs, particularly in major cities, could be a drawback.

3. Distance from Home: Being far from family and friends in Canada could lead to feelings of homesickness, which is a common concern for international students.

4. Cultural Adjustment: Adapting to a new culture and making friends in a foreign country can be challenging initially. This adjustment period might pose some difficulties.

international students are required to have Overseas Student Health Cover (OSHC).

Cultural Awareness: Prepare for cultural adjustments and embrace the opportunity to learn from a diverse international community. Attend orientation programs and seek out student support services.

Time Management: Develop strong time management skills to balance academic demands, clinical practice, and personal life. Dental programs can be rigorous, so staying organized is crucial.

Build a Support System: Connect with fellow international students and engage in university clubs or associations.

Building a support network can help ease the transition and provide a sense of belonging.

Explore the Region: Take advantage of your time in Australia to explore not only the Gold Coast but also other parts of the country. Australia offers a diverse range of experiences and natural beauty.

Stay Informed: Stay informed about any updates or changes related to visa regulations, academic requirements, and university policies. Regularly check the university's communication channels. Remember that studying abroad can be a transformative and rewarding

	Remember that individual experiences can vary widely, and what one student likes or dislikes about a university may differ from another's perspective.		experience. Embrace the opportunity to learn, grow, and expand your horizons both academically and personally.
Law	I like the location and the people I've met, dislike the amount of communication for students in my particular program with information regarding graduation.	I like the accelerated option to graduate quickly, taking 4 courses is extremely challenging however especially when you need to work.	Have some savings and be prepared to study full time.
Medicine	Dislike: Facilities are lacking, university seems small and underfunded.  Like: student body is helpful, other Canadians are supportive, location, lots to get involved with, scholarships available for international students.	Like: small class size, tuition is more affordable compared to other schools.  Dislike: unorganized, some lecturers are poor quality.	Seek out upper year international students for guidance prior to arriving to get advice on where to live, what to expect, etc., (the sooner the better). Don't get too worried about the wildlife, it's not so bad.
Medicine	Great teachers and straight to the subject.  Dislike - No meal plan.	Lots to study, high quality education.	Need to follow slightly different study pattern.
Medicine	I like how close-knit the medical community is on campus. However, I feel like scheduling in the medical program needs to be improved.	I like the class sizes - it's very close-knit and I really like how the staff is willing to listen and respond to our concerns.  Teaching methods, especially guest lectures, need improvement, as well as scheduling/timetabling needs improvement.	You'll definitely feel welcomed on campus because there are already so many people from Canada here in the medical program, but just be prepared for a culture shock.

Medicine

Like: Receptive staff, very supportive peers, good facilities.

Dislike: Needs more study areas, more plug points, certain staff members have poor teaching skills.

Come in with an open, positive attitude because building community will make or break your experience. Don't be afraid to make friends with the Australians too, because it'll be very tempting to stay in Canadian circles. Work hard, but remember this is a marathon, not a sprint, so it's important to have fun and socialize.

Medicine

The location is good. The athletic facilities are not so good.

Tight cohort, lots of work.

Meet people as soon as possible and through social media.

Medicine

Love it here.

Love the program.

Prepare months before arrival.

Medicine

Love location, easy of access, school community feel.

Like class since, new course outline so they're still working out some organization kinks. Most teachers are good but there are so many online resources that are also good so find what works for you.

Look into additional resources asap/anki, ninja nerd, Bords and beyond.

Other
(Bachelor of Psychology (Honours))

I love the activities they always have going on, and how Griffith emphasizes student life, rather than just study. I think the only thing Griffith could improve in is to offer more diverse options for financial aid for international students.

I love my course content, I just wish that course convenors were able to be more involved with students. Sometimes it feels like we only ever hear from the tutors, and that the course convenors are "hidden" behind screens and mini lectures.

Embrace your North American background coming to Australia and to Griffith in general. Often we try to integrate quickly to fit in but your uniqueness as Canadians or Americans is what sets you apart at Griffith; it is what makes you special. I personally love to meet fellow North Americans... Especially Canadians :)!! Also, try to make friends, but also take some time to take care of yourself. Don't stress if you don't make a lot of friends right away, the right people will come at just the right moment!

Pharmacy	I like that the learning is very hands on, and that there are tons of resources provided by the university.	Like: class sizes, teaching methods.	Build a strong network of support, having that support helps you adjust much faster.
Public Health	I love my university! My university provides me with wonderful experiences and resources to elevate my academic career.	My course has provided me with extensive knowledge and experience. I am glad I am able to pursue my course at this university.	Trust the OzTREKK team! Also, research deliberately regarding your future universities and programs to be aware about their environment and program curriculum.
Speech Pathology	I like the holistic and integrated approach to the content that they take. I dislike the cost.	The cohort is a good size, peers are great, most instructors are excellent. Dislike the organization of the course material, dislike the placement locations as they advertise not travelling more than an hour but I am doing 2.5 each way.	Make sure you have enough money.
Speech Pathology	University is good so far, the program keeps me busy so I don't rely on experience the activities that the uni has to offer.	It is actually quite intense, I would say that its quite different in terms of Canadian teaching styles.	I would probably say mentally prepare for a tougher program, and just make sure to make friends with your cohort. It's a small class and if you have friends, it makes school is more manageable, and the whole experience worthwhile.
Speech Pathology	The university is clean and updated and has many free functions or events for students. The campus could have more indoor lunch locations for when the weather is cool or rainy.	I like that the program focuses on clinical skills and hands-on experience. They can improve a lot on clarity in their communication to students on what to expect.	Have realistic expectations for the financial aspect and realize you will need to be generous in your calculations for preparation. Be prepared to also approach the lecturers when things don't make sense because it will happen but they are willing to help.

ADVICE ABOUT LIVING DOWN UNDER

The advice below is segmented by university, although some of the suggestions apply to anyone moving to Australia or New Zealand, regardless of which program or university they will be in.

BOND UNIVERSITY

- Try to keep yourself busy and talk to your family often.
- Make friends and remember to enjoy your time. Explore this wonderful country.
- Get your living situation sorted before you arrive, or at least have an Airbnb close to the university you can stay at while you look. Set up your bank, phone, and Gocard day 1.
- Rental crisis on the Gold Coast, living and rent is expensive and difficult to find.
- Australia is tropical Canada. Very comfortable.
- You'll make friends!!
- Get your bank account and phone plan right away, everything else will come with time. Lot and lots of summer clothes and grab your sunscreen here.
- It can be challenging at time. It comes in waves where you are happy to be here and then times when you are struggling. If you know that coming in, so you can set your own expectations, that is really important. But also, as much as FaceTime is not the same, it is the best option, and I really use it all the time. If you need help or just someone to talk to, the counsellors on campus are EXCELLENT.
- Manage your time with school but branch out and make connections.
- Make friends with your cohort. They will be your family Down Under.

CHARLES STURT UNIVERSITY

- Always keep in touch with family even if it is for a few minutes. It can get to you really bad in the beginning but as you establish friends it gets easier and as school gets more heavy you kind of forget about certain things. My number one advice is take care of your health, especially eating properly. Grocery prices are expensive but I found I did not prioritize eating consistently and let me tell you, you will get really tired really quick if you don't. Also make time for the gym as I can't stress taking care of your mental and physical health as school can burn you out.
- Find a group of friends asap! They will make your life much easier and better. Making sure you do your best to go out and explore your city!

DEAKIN UNIVERSITY

- Bring a friend.
- Important to have a strong support network while making the move and for the first few months.
- Try to push yourself to make friends.

FLINDERS UNIVERSITY

- Plan ahead with friends and family on times to call and visit (due to the nature of the course it can be tough for us to go home). To make friends you definitely need to put yourself out there and say yes to as much as possible! Try to get involved in different aspects of the course and in the city.
- Get excited to live in a tropical country and make sure you explore your surroundings, make good friends and connections with other students so you have good support.
- Talk to everyone during orientation week!
- Very easy and adaptable living.
- Put yourself out there and be willing to try new things.
- Video call family and friends weekly, make friends with fellow international students, and find a group.
- Make friends and socialize with everyone. Medicine becomes cliquey very quickly. Make friends outside of school as well.
- Not challenging at all. Very similar to Canada.
- Make friends that you can be yourself with.
- Budget to plan to come home sometime in the year.
- Homesickness will typically sink in after a few months so try to stay in touch with your friends and families as much as possible while keeping the time change in mind. Try to connect with other international students since they are going through the same tradition.
- I lived across the country during my undergrad and had new issues. But don't be scared to swallow your pride and lean on your family as you will, masters programs are intense. Take the support where you can get it.

GRIFFITH UNIVERSITY

- I think overall it's pretty similar to Canada in terms of culture, but Gold Coast is less diverse than bigger Canadian cities, so that does come with pros and cons (i.e. food, people, etc.). Also, Queensland is known to be one of the more racist states, that is something to keep in mind that you may have to deal with outside of uni.
- Make one or two good friends whom you can trust and can help each other, spend your time wisely and stay in touch with the family.

- Make friends as soon as possible.
- Culturally it's VERY similar to Canada. I try to talk to my parents every day, but that amount will change for everyone, but it's important to very consciously make the effort.
- Get your accommodations figured out as soon as possible and keep in touch with family at home. Also, make friends in your program!
- Immerse yourself with the Aussies, some people found good friendships in the Canadian group but I wanted to become part of the community and make mostly Aussie friends.
- I was very homesick for the first 2-3 weeks I was in Australia due to the large culture shock. I would recommend joining communities and clubs to meet new people and make new friends, that helped me alot. I would also recommend staying in touch with your family and friends back in Canada (ex. video calling everyday). Also avoid staying at home too much, going outside every once in a while helps refresh your mind and improves your mood.
- Australia is a lot similar to Canada than I thought it was. Adapting won't be an issue, although it is a struggle to start driving in opposite direction.
- Adapting to life in Australia or New Zealand as an international student can be an exciting but challenging journey. Here is some advice to help future students make a smooth transition:
  1. Research and Prepare: Before departure, research the local culture, customs, and lifestyle. Understanding the basics will make the initial adjustment easier.
  2. Visa and Legal Requirements: Familiarize yourself with visa requirements and ensure all necessary paperwork is in order. Be aware of visa conditions and deadlines.
  3. Accommodation: Arrange accommodation well in advance. Whether it's on-campus housing, off-campus rentals, or homestays, consider proximity to your university and budget constraints.
  4. Budgeting: Create a budget to manage your finances effectively. Understand the cost of living and plan your expenses accordingly. Look for opportunities to save money, like student discounts.
  5. Healthcare: Familiarize yourself with the healthcare system in your host country. Obtain the necessary health insurance and know how to access medical care if needed.
  6. Cultural Sensitivity: Be open-minded and respectful of local customs and values. Embrace cultural differences and make an effort to engage with local communities.

7. Stay Connected: Stay in touch with family and friends back home, but also make an effort to build new relationships with fellow students and locals. Join clubs, attend events, and socialize.

8. Time Management: Balance your academic responsibilities with personal time and exploration. Effective time management will help reduce stress.

9. Explore and Travel: Take advantage of your time abroad to explore the country. Both Australia and New Zealand offer stunning natural beauty and diverse landscapes. Travel when you can.

10. Seek Support: Universities often have support services for international students. Don't hesitate to reach out if you encounter challenges or need assistance.

11. Stay Informed: Stay informed about any changes in regulations, university policies, or important updates related to your student status.

12. Stay Safe: Be mindful of your safety. Familiarize yourself with local safety guidelines and emergency contacts. Keep your belongings secure.

13. Language Skills: If English is not your first language, work on improving your language skills. Effective communication will help you feel more confident and integrated.

Remember that adapting to a new country takes time, and it's normal to face challenges along the way. Embrace the experience, be patient with yourself, and seek support when needed. Your time abroad can be incredibly rewarding and transformative.

- I personally make sure to call my family everyday to stay on touch and make sure I don't feel too alone. I would also recommend getting involved in activities on campus.
- Do your research about accommodation and things like food and transportation costs, but also know that once you get here, you will just have to take things one day at a time. When dealing with homesickness regarding things you miss from home, try to find little places that resemble home, whether that be a shop, a cafe, a park, etc. It's important to find things in our new city that remind us of home, so that they can comfort homesickness, and also create a new "homey" feeling as well. When it comes to missing family and staying in touch with them, calling and texting them is the best option. I know it's not the same, but it really will help keep you connected. Send them pictures that make you happy, or if you use social media often, add your family to your close friends list and post your adventures on Instagram/Facebook for them to follow along and live through you!
- Being able to call family with set times, planning when to go back, make friends.

- It's easy to connect with other international students. Going to a university with smaller classes facilitates this. Make use of FaceTime and video calls. When you feel homesick, think about the winter.
- Take opportunities to connect with people right away that will have things in common with you. Have a plan before arriving on when you will go home for a visit so that you have something to look forward to if things get tough.
- Make friend, work hard, find something you like and stick to it.
- Make friends with people outside of your program and country! Try new things.
- It is very difficult to stay away from family, but it is also a great opportunity to develop yourself and attain self-confidence and self-reliance. Living abroad will enhance your knowledge and ability to understand the world in a broader sense.
- It will take time to adjust but joining clubs and socializing with students on campus helps a lot with making new friends.

JAMES COOK UNIVERSITY

- Making new friends and having a good community to rely on is very important. You can't do medical school by yourself.
- Make friends, use FaceTime to chat with loved ones.
- I'd say make it a priority to FaceTime family back home whenever the time lines up to do so. As for making friends don't be afraid to talk to the people who are taking the same course as you. It's the easiest way to get to know new people.
- Homesickness and feeling like you don't belong is normal in the first sem. Just get through it and make as many connections as possible, by 2nd semester you'll find your people I guarantee it. Be ready for your mental health to be tested in that first semester and please don't hesitate to utilize all the resources at your disposal and to even need to help of professionals outside of school (I know I did).
- Everyone here is really nice, making friends in your course and accommodation will be pretty easy. I recommend staying in touch with your parents, I call mine every day if I can. And personalize your room as much as you can, make it a second home.
- Just be prepared for the heat and bring some shorts!
- Just stay busy, you'll do fine.
- Keep in contact with friends and family back in Canada by any means possible. The weather is something to get use too the heat here is no joke.

MACQUARIE UNIVERSITY

- Find times that work best for calls back home with the time difference it can be hard.
- Always make time for yourself and new/old friends. You will need it!
- I'm not sure. I'm very different to many people so I don't think my advice would apply generally.
- Call up your friends from home if you're feeling home sick!! Get a routine down ASAP.

- It's essential to make friends, and having friends outside of school makes it even better and makes it feel more like home. It takes time, and you will always miss home, but take advantage of the great things in Australia.
- It is pretty easy to make friends with those in the program. Make sure to plan lots of study session which can then turn into planning social events. Facetime is your best friend with staying in touch, but if not possible than an easy update text to family and friends is still great.
- Definitely make friends and don't isolate yourself at home, connect with other international students but also don't be shy to befriend domestic students!

MONASH UNIVERSITY

- You'll become close with people in the program, however for myself the majority of people I became close with are doing the end-to-end rural program so I won't get the opportunity to interact and work with them in a clinical setting which is disappointing. I did not return back to Canada during my "winter" break in June, however the majority of the other Canadian students did which they found refreshing from my understanding. It helps relieved their home sickness and feel that they could push through for the remainder of the year. FaceTime is great for communicating with friends and family back home but just get used to stark time difference when trying to connect with them, it can be challenging at times.
- Go to lots of organized activities. They are a lot of fun and are a great way to meet people.
- Making friends, staying in touch with friends and families back home.

UNIVERSITY OF MELBOURNE

- Dealing with homesickness was not a big issue for me but some colleagues expressed homesickness and depression to a much higher degree, so if staying close to the family is an important factor to your lifestyle then you should make a very careful consideration when choosing to stay in Australia or NZ.
- Always call family back home. Make friends with you classmates and outside of school.
- Growing your network, staying in touch with friends family back home.
- Honestly it's very similar to Canada! I usually stay in touch via FaceTime :)
- Getting a place is quite tough in the beginning but feel reassured that you will definitely find a place to live. As well, feeling homesick is more than likely, but time goes really fast because you're so so busy!
- Make an effort to engage in your family and friends social media when you're gone to stay in touch. Do some math and figure out the best times of day to call home and facetime. Work on getting to know a lot of people before pigeonholing yourself into only 1 or 2 friendships when you don't know people well. Keep up your hobbies and things you do for self-care outside of school. Make an effort to travel (road trips and travel between semesters) because the time goes fast and you don't want to regret not seeing the things you really wanted to see.

- Make a lot a lot of friends especially international students so you have each other during the breaks and try to travel if you can.
- Make lots of friends inside and outside of your program, explore and don't be afraid to try new things.
- Think of them as your favourite cousins with a funny little accent, they are super nice and very interesting so first and foremost focus on getting to know people, be nice, that way you'll make friends in no time. Plan little outings, enjoy the scenery take advantage of the brilliant cafe and brunch culture and visit art nooks around the city. You could do these things alone as well. Point being, learn to enjoy and appreciate the beauty of your city! Oh, and keep your loved ones in on the ride, send them pictures and videos of you having fun.
- Stay in touch with people from home so you're not too homesick but also create a community outside of that so that you can feel immersed.
- Say hi to everyone! Very easy to make friends in the first few weeks since everyone is in the same boat and have come from different places. Don't just stick to the Canadians in your program!!!
- Go to the farewell dinner/party that OzTREKK hosts back in Canada. I met my roommate and now best friend there. Also join clubs, get involved to meet other locals and internationals.
- Explore the city a lot! you will find that Aus is very similar to Canada with some exceptions. Try the amazing food and coffee here. Always video chat back home to stay in touch with everybody but also live in the moment with all the other Canadians and Australians.
- Life in Australia is very similar to Canada. You can pretty much get everything you need here including all your stores, restaurants, and fast food options. There are a few quirks that you discover Australians do but nothing seriously different about the people either; everyone has been very friendly! My only advice would be to stay in contact with your friends and family back home! The time difference makes it harder so you often have to either wake up early or stay up late to call home.
- Talk to everyone in your cohort during orientation! Go to all the events! Friends who are going through a similar experience as you are makes you feel less alone. Also, just explore! Melbourne has so much to do.
- Be open to going to different events to meet people and have a schedule of times you call back home so you always know when you will be able to talk to your family and friends and not feel as homesick.
- Create as homey of a space as you can to establish a place of familiarity and overcome that feeling of home sickness.
- It is very similar to Canada, so you likely wont have a problem. you can also still keep in touch with friends and family through facetime in the morning and nights, you'll make friends through your class tutorials and during any extracurriculars you get involved with.
- Go to uni orientation week events to make friends. Try to find times in the day that make it easy to call home (I usually call while I eat breakkie).
- Attend social events held by faculty so you can meet people in your program. Finding a group of supportive friends in your program makes a huge difference!

- Get a support network and new friends! Extend yourself to go out there and have new experiences in Oz!
- Make friend is important, also since Australia is extremely chill country, it should be pretty easy to adjust.
- Everyone is in the same boat, you'll meet friends and others in your program who did the same transition! Also find something in the community to integrate yourself into.

UNIVERSITY OF OTAGO

- Do it!
- Definitely make friends, get to know the people you might be going with, those who apply with you. Make time to talk to family, with the time difference it can be difficult, it I found it very helpful to video chat with my family everyday, takes away from being homesick.
- Try your best to socialize and keep active, don't isolate yourself. It can get a bit lonely so keep in touch with family back home.
- You will make lots of friends. Do the socials sports and or gatherings. There is always something happening.

UNIVERSITY OF QUEENSLAND

- Explore the city you're in. Bring comfort foods from home.
- Living expenses are on the rise so get a job, facetime your family often, make friends in your program but also make sure to have friends outside of uni.
- Make friends by going to every event or social possible - constantly reach out to new people. When I'm feeling homesick, it helps to talk to people who are in the same boat as me.
- For Brisbane in particular, I find that the beautiful weather year-round helps to reduce homesickness, and also the change in scenery is great too. Making friends is easy since you can connect with other students in your program or outside of that too. Staying in touch with family is easy through phone, facetime, etc. And you can visit back home too over breaks.
- A lot of students in your cohort to be friends with and various clubs to your individual preference. Call home often as it helps deal with homesickness. Go to dental school events as they are fun.
- It is better to find your accommodations and where to live and make a really good budget schedule. It's really hard to find the accommodations in AU due to housing crisis.
- Try to FaceTime your parents back home consistently, join some clubs or intramurals to meet some people. But the program is set up well to meet lots of students early on.
- Don't treat it any differently than you normally would, just be yourself. Stay in contact with friends and family back home.
- Keep in touch with family and friends back home. Go to events and make friends in Australia.

- IT'S HOT! Get used to not be ok with the cold. You need to adapt to the weather and it really messes up with you if you don't expect it or if you're not ready for it.
- Try to get into the routine you have at home, for me finding a gym and a place to run was really beneficial in feeling more at home, also if you can balance it getting a part time job somewhere you think is cool will bring you a lot of really great friends.
- It is not as hard as you think to get your bank institution set up, a phone plan (they're so much cheaper and have so much more data) or to time a place to live. The housing market can be daunting, but if you put in effort, you will find what you are looking for. It can take a couple months for the homesickness to come in (i.e., you're basically in the honeymoon phase with living abroad for the first 3 months) but know that this is totally normal and there are so many resources available through the university campuses. It is not hard to stay in contact with friend back home, you just have to get good at scheduling time each morning to FaceTime / call friends and family. And take the chances you have to go back home over breaks!
- Get to know your fellow Canadians and always remember your purpose so that you don't give up.
- I recommend attending as many orientation and campus events when you arrive to meet new people.
- Start building your new support network right away! Try to call friends and family back home to ease your transition.
- Making friends who I really connect with was very difficult until I got a job, which I know not everyone can juggle, but for me it was the most essential part to adapting to living here. There are so many running groups and smaller communities to participate in too. Making sure to take time to go on mini trips or explore Queensland more is very important to not get consumed by studying too.
- I think my biggest struggle was the homesickness. Once I landed here, it hit really hard and I wasn't expecting it to hit like that. But the best way to tackle that (and this is basically what everyone says, but it truly works), is to stay busy and distract yourself. Go out and explore, go house hunting, go meet other Canadians arriving. Just do what you can to stay busy and distracted and that really helps with homesickness. Of course, stay in touch and talk to your family and friends more, especially in those initial first few weeks, because that really makes you feel connected and like things haven't changed too much (even though they have). Just know that everyone goes through the same thing and talk about it to get through it! Everyone's adjusting, you aren't alone and trust me when I say its temporary. Soon enough you'll get so busy and start working towards your dreams and you'll feel/notice the homesickness less.
- Put yourself out there and go talk to people and join clubs.
- We love it here. Enjoy everything there is to do, explore the city, Brisbane has so much to offer. Make friends with Aussies and they'll take you out and you can engage in "cultural" (sporting) events. :)
- As someone who is very close with their family and friends left behind, pencil into your schedule intentional time to call home. I try to call home once a week and usually for at least an hour. In the beginning, try to expose yourself to as many activities as you can. Go to events, talk to people in class, stay on campus to study. You'll find your people pretty quickly.
- Make friends early, join clubs, and travel.
- Be prepared for extreme heat and humidity (it can get pretty rough). Get to know people who live around you! We live right next to some of our best friends and it is really nice to be able to text them "Hey want to come over?" and they are there in 5 minutes.

It worked really well for me to schedule a weekly video call with my family to make sure everybody was free to chat and it allowed me to focus more time on studying while still keeping in touch without having unanswered calls.

- It is the same.
- Find a living accommodation near the city or CBD so it is easier for you to do things.
- Schedule your calls with friends or family, be open to the Australians they can be super friendly.
- Explore the country and learn why everyone loves it! There's beautiful beaches, really nice people, and many things you've never seen before. Make all the friends you can but having a core group is nice, especially ones from back home who might understand your homesickness more. Call your family lots because they miss you just as much if not more.
- Make a lot of good friends here! I rely on my friends and they're people I can really count on. Make sure you're calling home regularly and keeping in touch with your friends. And the holidays are really long so make sure to meet up with everyone when you go back home!
- Prioritizing your mental health. Reach out for help if you are struggling.
- Everyone's just as scared as you are, if you get past that initial fear it's easy to get to know other students and make friends from there.
- Its easy to make friends in uni since no one has any friends so everyone wants to meet people.

UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY

- All the other international students are dealing with the same things, ask questions to your peers/friends/Facebook groups for anything 'settling in' related, and find some recurring times in your week/day where you know (or you've let your friends/family know) that its a good time to call & catch up to avoid telephone-tag.
- It's not very different from living in North America it's an easy transition.
- Make friends and talk to as many people as you can.
- Join activities, clubs, talk to fam back home often.
- Get out and try something new to make friends outside your program too.
- Join school clubs or participate in student dental organizations to make new connections.
- Have hobbies and make new friends.
- Make time for FaceTiming friends/family back home, best to do it in the mornings.
- I think it's really important to do other things other then school. Go surfing or to the beach on the weekends. Say yes to doing things with new friends. Stay in touch with your support system at home!
- Homesickness is normal and will come regardless of how you prepare for it. To help ease the loneliness, talk to other Canadian students and share how you are feeling. Call home regularly to talk to friends and family.
- Despite the time change, make an effort to stay in touch with family and friends back home.

- Make friends, explore the city.
- Australians are such a fun people. Super friendly. If possible, consider living in a catered college, really makes transition easier for someone who's never lived outside of family home before.
- EXPLORE your new city. Everyone around you knows all the suburbs because they've lived here most their lives, its okay if you don't. And I say explore not just so you know what people are talking about when they say "North Shore Beaches", but also for you to know your surroundings, see new places, see more of what its actually like to live in Australia, outside of the CBD (downtown) where your uni is likely to be located. Remember, Canada isn't just downtown, we have suburbs too, and most people live in suburbs, explore them.
- I think you will have to accept the fact that you will miss out on some things back home. That is something that hit me because I realized I am missing out on doing things with my family. If you can afford it, take trips home during your holidays just to get a mental refresh. I am yet to do so but I know when I do I'll come back feeling a little better and more ready to finish off the program.
- Try to make new friends and not just stay with one group the whole time. Make sure you make time to go travel. The time you have here goes by very fast so make the most of it.
- Make sure you keep in touch with your friends from back home, but don't forget to put yourself out there and immerse yourself in the experience here.
- Be open and explore! People are super friendly in Sydney. Find a place where you can take root, and always make time to call back home when you need it.
- Try to make friends with locals.
- Moving to Sydney, a massive Sydney, is likely to easier if your coming from Toronto or even Montreal but more difficult if your user to having easy access to the mountains for instance or are from a rural area. The beach is a bit far from the uni via bus, so if that's important to you, you may want to consider getting a car. Sydney is also very expensive so save as much as you can. However, the beaches are fantastic and the breaks between semesters and at mid sems are long so there's plenty of time to explore and enjoy the country.
- Friends have been easy to come by and many Canadians are already here!
- It's quite similar to Canada, and making friends especially among the Canadians is super easy, and everyone is welcoming. Don't be afraid to reach out, we are all happy to help
- I have always been a big traveller and very independent so I did not have a hard time adjusting to life in Australia. The greatest adjustment I had to make was learning the time differences between the two places. Often I was calling my friends and family at 1 in the morning and was upset that they weren't answering haha!
- There is a big time difference when communicating with your family. But schedule calls to make with your loved ones everyday, interact with people in your program. If you're in a masters there's sometimes a big group chat you can be a part of. Try to make friends with people that live close by so it's easy to meet up when you do feel homesick.

- Don't focus all your time on your studies. Try to find different hobbies, make new friends, and experience new things! These all helped me integrate into a new country and make the most out of living in Australia.
- It is hot so prepare mentally for that.
- Lots of FaceTiming, find living accommodations with multiple roommates.
- Don't forget your family and friends that are rooting for you.
- Make friends, go out, be easy with yourself.
- Worry about homelessness.
- Connect with other Canadians!! I can't say it enough, you all struggle together and struggled to get here. It's a huge support that alleviated SO much pressure!

UNIVERSITY OF WESTERN AUSTRALIA

- Try to find a time that works for video chatting family and friends back home, the time zone difference can be awkward to manage.
- Try to connect with people outside of your program (though sports or other activities you like to do). This is a really helpful way to feel more settled.
- Stay in touch with family and friends by any means. Get a mental health plan in place in case things go wrong. A lot of us Canadians had a bit of "trauma" from the Canadian med school admission process and anger towards our home country for not having proper infrastructure in place to become doctors back home. Local students just simply did not understand what we had gone through to get there. However, income and life here is much easier than Canada. Work during med is possible and pay rates are better (and higher for evening and weekend work in basic jobs). The weather and fashion is amazing and I do NOT miss Canadian weather. Plus there are parrots everywhere! Look up Parakeets (Rainbow parrots ).
- FaceTime is the best to stay connected. Be outgoing in your classes and chat with people. You'll find many are in your same situation just looking for friends.
- Live in residence to make friends more quickly.
- Making friends is great since a lot of people move here for medical school! Be open to new experiences. The heat can also get to you so be prepared! My city at least needs a car to get around and enjoy for the sake the convenience.
- Have at least one day a week where you FaceTime family members, wear sunscreen daily, and order your groceries from Coles (only a $2 delivery fee if you do it a couple days in advance).
- Making friends, stay in contact with friends and family as much as possible.

RECOMMENDED STUDENT GROUPS AT GRIFFITH

The clubs listed below were specifically suggested by survey respondents. Each university has numerous other clubs and groups which can often be found on the university's website.

- I would say try and be active in your program's club and volunteer opportunities as well.
- There are many student clubs you could join, be wise with your time.
- GUMS (Griffith University Medicine Society)
- Med Revue
- The dental sports team is awesome!
- SURGIA (Surgical Interests Association)
- Sports clubs to keep active, and cultural/religious clubs to meet other people like yourself.
- Griffith University Dental Student Association
- International Student Associations: Most universities have international student associations or clubs that are specifically designed to help international students connect, share experiences, and learn about the local culture.
- Cultural Clubs: If you're interested in promoting your own culture or learning about others, consider joining cultural clubs or groups related to your background. These clubs often host events and celebrations.
- Academic Clubs: Depending on your field of study, there may be academic clubs or organizations related to your course. These can be a great way to network with peers and professors.
- Sports and Fitness Clubs: Universities offer a wide range of sports and fitness clubs, from soccer to yoga. It's a great way to stay active and meet people with similar interests.
- Volunteer and Community Service Groups: Joining a volunteer group allows you to give back to the local community and gain valuable experience. It's also an excellent way to make friends.
- Arts and Creativity Clubs: Whether you're into music, theater, or art, many universities have clubs and groups dedicated to these creative pursuits.
- Outdoor and Adventure Clubs: Australia and New Zealand offer incredible outdoor opportunities. Consider joining a hiking, camping, or outdoor adventure club to explore the natural beauty of the region.
- Language Exchange Groups: If you're looking to improve your language skills, language exchange groups can be a fun and educational way to meet local students and practice speaking.
- Entrepreneurship and Innovation Clubs: If you have an entrepreneurial spirit, look for clubs or groups focused on startups, innovation, or business development.

- Social and Networking Groups: There are often general social or networking groups that host events, parties, and gatherings. These can be great for meeting a diverse range of people.
- Religious or Spiritual Groups: If you have specific religious or spiritual beliefs, you can find like-minded communities and groups on campus.
- Special Interest Clubs: Whether you're into gaming, photography, cooking, or any other hobby, there's likely a club for it on campus. When you arrive at your university, attend orientation events and fairs to learn about the various clubs and groups available. Don't hesitate to reach out and attend meetings or events that interest you. Getting involved in extracurricular activities can greatly enhance your student experience and help you build a strong social network.
- Griffith has tons of social or sport clubs to join, but one of my favorite groups to be a part of was the Mayor's Student Ambassador Program. If you're studying in Australia for more than two trimesters, I would recommend applying for that program, it's so much fun!
- Tennis Club
- MedSci Club
- I joined a group that I connected with over my faith beliefs and were all post-graduate students as well.
- There various ethnic clubs and groups that celebrate their culture.
- Future International Students Group

ACCOMMODATION ADVICE

- Don't book something before you go. It can be really scary but I recommend booking an Airbnb for two weeks when you arrive and start house hunting right away. That way you can see places!!
- Find something close to the school within walking distance unless you're going to drive. Start emailing a bunch of accommodation places 1–2 months before you arrive and see what vacancies they will have.
- Start looking early and get a hold of a realtor.
- Look on flatmates.com and Facebook rental groups.
- Start early. Get looking at the market and find people who want to room with you. Make sure you guys are all in Australia because sometimes real estate agents won't accept applications if one person is in Canada.
- Try your best for furnished, especially if you don't have a car but be flexible. Transit here is decent so if you are a bit further away that is always an option.
- Start at student accommodations, then look for other housing just so it's easy when you first get here.
- Find something within your budget and think about on or off campus whether you want to drive and housemates. Living on campus you make closer friendships because you see people everyday whereas off campus you make a bit more effort because you just see people in class.
- Staying on campus first year may be a good option so that you're comfortable and have safe accommodations while you find your bearings overseas!
- Private accommodation is completely different in Oz and it is stressful.
- Try to be open about your options and be prepared to make multiple offers on many properties if looking at private rentals.
- Plan ahead!!! Student accommodation options can be quite expensive but are easier to get into. Share houses can be tough to find and you will want to consider many factors before committing to a place.
- Try to find something that is located close to campus or close to public transit if you aren't getting a car. Try to find a place with reasonable rent since cost of living in Australia can be pretty high. If you are living with housemates make sure that everyone's following house rules.
- Go to as many showing as you can, have proof if funds ready for your applications since you won't have any income.
- Budget, budget, budget!
- Select what is best for your purpose. Everybody has a different opinion about residence.
- Budget your expenses. Limit fast food like Subway. It may be tempting but tracking your health is very important.
- Uni lodge is pretty easy to find online. Just search up your university campus and places to live and many of them will pop up and price is usually shown on website.

- Land in an AirBnB and start arranging inspections, can also offer to pay some rent upfront if possible which can help with rental application.
- Try to find accommodation with other people from OzTREKK. Use the contact list to reach out.
- Book viewings before travelling to Australia.
- Get an AirBnb for the first month and consider apartment inspections a full-time job.
- If you can be in Australia several weeks before school starts then arrange inspections (required for private apartment rentals) but if that is difficult, try to be in one of student accommodations (Unilodge, Scape, etc.) or school residence (International house, Graduate hose) and try to move out, if you wish to do so, in second year.
- Don't try to set everything up at all once as it can get overwhelming try to take things step by step.
- If you have a family member or friend living where you're looking to move, ask them if they'd be willing to go to a viewing on your behalf. Most rentals need an in-person viewing before you can apply. If this is an option for you, you can have accommodation sorted for when you land.

The table below displays current accommodation details for current students.

GRIFFITH UNIVERSITY
Weekly Rent ($AUD with Utilities)	How Long it Took to Find Accommodation After Arrival	Suburb &amp; Building with Reviews
	(% of Griffith students in that type of accommodation)
Private Rental	44% — Arranged before arrival	Smith Collective, Southport
Min. Reported Rent: $230	19% — Less than one week	Would recommend. “Has a grocery store and pool. No soccer sets in the park. Do not live at Griffith University Village. Live at Smith Collective.”
	19% — 2–3 weeks	“Very close to campus, very close to groceries and tram. It's hard to get a meeting until you are here, and if Smith isn't responding digitally, meet with them at their office.”
Max. Reported Rent: $700	19% — 3+ weeks	“It is convenient but pricy. It is right next to the supermarket, so I haven't needed to purchase a car, but the rent has been increasing. Figure it out as soon as possible and negotiate a 9-month lease.”
Avg. of All Responses: $432		“Extremely accessible to transit. Clean and good amenities. The community complains about cost but everything in the area has increased in rent. I like being close to the campus and close to the tram line. These were key when I did not have a car. The suburb has a clean and safe area but also one you don't want to go alone to at night. Our building allowed us to rent before arriving by signing a site unseen form. My roommate and I only did so because we heard good reviews from people we knew who lived here. They are well acquainted with the international student process so they knew exactly what instructions to give us. From that we learned you need to have an Australian bank account set up beforehand to sign the lease. I had friends who rented a short-term rental before committing to a lease and it worked out for them as well. It helps if someone is able to come with you for support (e.g. a parent, friend, partner).”

“It is excellent in terms of being in close proximity to Griffith University (10-minute walk). However, it is quite expensive, and neighbours can be very noisy (ex. loud music) which is annoying. The public transport (bus + tram) is excellent. There is a very good community (Smith Collective community), with a grocery store, variety of restaurants, barber nearby.”

“Very clean and close to campus. Near stores such as Woolworths and walking distance to campus.”

“It's going up to $345 in November so it will increase again by February. It's a good option if you can afford the rent. It's pricey and rent is continuously being increased. There is a grocery store, and some restaurants in the Smith Collective. The biggest pro is that it is right by uni and the tram station. I actually stayed in the Uni Village for 2 weeks, and it was not for me. I moved out as soon as I found a girl looking for a roommate at Smith Collective. I would say that unless you don't mind noise and are willing to take a gamble on how clean your roommates will be; it may not be the best option. Also, Australia has spiders and cockroaches, which personally I'm not a fan of but some of my roommates were okay with. There are other accommodation options, but you would need to come here to figure it out as far as I'm aware.”

Southport

“Fairly clean and organized. Owned by private company and charge way too much. There is a train to the beach. Dislike that it's hard to navigate without a car if you aren't going to the beach.”

“Clean, and a 10-minute walk from campus. Close to public transport and a grocery store.”

Biggera Waters

“I live near Harbourn town, so I would definitely recommend this suburb, as it is close to the Griffith Gold Coast Campus. It's close to transit, close to shops and markets, and it's safe.”

Burleigh Waters

“Transit is okay, live near a tram. Rentals are quite high. Roommates are common. I love being close to the beach and surf, but it takes a while to get to the uni.”

Coomera

“I lived at Smith Collective first, which has its pros and cons. Pros: walking distance to grocery store, restaurants, tram station, lots of other students live here, and Griffith University is at a walking distance; cons: expensive compared to other places and be careful to do the entry condition report with as much detail as possible because they will try to charge you for everything when you move out, so you want to be safe by covering your grounds right from the beginning. Also, they ask for proof of Australian bank statements even before you arrive in Australia (which is impossible), so the only options you have are: 1) tell them you can pay the entire lease's rent up front, or 2) if you have a relative in Australia who is willing to be your guarantor, you can add them along and show their bank/financial details to help your application.

The place where I live now in Coomera, I really like - it's much more affordable and homey. However, commute to school would be hard without a car, so unless you have a car, it might not be ideal to rent here.

I like how it's a quiet neighborhood with families settled here. It's also a newer area, with new houses.

The only disadvantage is that a car will be needed for commute.”

“It's a shared townhouse with other Canadian students. If you can't arrange a shared living arrangement in advance with other Canadians, try to get a short term rental and then seek out other students for a shared space once you arrive.

Like: Costco just opened nearby! Quiet neighbourhood. supermarket nearby.

Dislike: far from school and requires a car amongst one of the students living.”

Ashmore

“It is a very nice area; however, public transportation is a little concern due to lack of availability of buses after a certain time of the day. The transportation is bit difficult.”

Surfers Paradise Boulevard 3355

“Yes, very close to tram. Anywhere along tram is close enough even as far as turfed practise of Broadbeach. It's only about 30 minutes and you can easily study in the team. Touristy but that makes it kind of fun to people watch.”

Student-purposed
Privately Managed 100% — Arranged before arrival

Min. Reported
Rent: $415

Max. Reported
Rent: $300

Avg. Reported
Rent: $358

University Village

“Close to university, stay away from the pool side rooms, lots of seniors in the campus, good place to live. Walking distance to the store is more than 20 min.”

Parkwood

“I would ask for them to stop hiking rents without increasing amenities. I like how close it is.”

No Griffith University students living in on-campus college or homestay accommodation completed the survey. As such, we don't have student reported data on rent, suggested buildings, or advice on that housing type.

General Accommodation Advice for Griffith University Students:

- Get at it early, network with students beforehand and where they live so that you do not end up with subpar housing.
- Prioritize close proximity to university and staying within budget.
- Look for accommodation early!
- Use the different accommodation sites that OzTREKK and Griffith recommends to find a place (like realestate.com.au, flatmates.com.au, etc.). I would also recommend finding a place somewhere along the G-Link tram line stops, so you're right next to transit. This next part is entirely personal preference, but if you prefer peace and quiet, don't look for a place in Surfers Paradise, it can get quite noisy as all of the most popular nightclubs and bars are located there. If you want to be closer to the nightlife, Surfers and Southport are close suburbs to choose from. Otherwise, many students also live at Parkwood or at Helensvale, which are close to tram stops and tend to be quieter.
- Facebook marketplace has many rentals, local roommates are helpful for making friends and finding things to do.
- Smith Collective would likely be your go-to, if you don't want to live at any University accommodations, for at least the first 6 months because every other place basically needs you to do in-person inspections. However, getting a place here has its own struggles. Smith Collective asks for proof of Australian bank statements (which is impossible since you're not even in Australia yet, I know), so there are a couple ways to navigate through this:
  - 1) pay the entire lease rent cost up-front.
  - 2) if you have a relative (or someone you know) who is an Australian resident/citizen and they are willing to be your guarantor, Smith Collective will accept that. They will just need your guarantor's details (financial documents, IDs, etc). Also, when commencing your lease, you will be provided with an entry condition report to fill. Please do this with as much detail as possible to prevent Smith Collective (or any other realtor) from keeping your bond/security deposit money at the end of your lease. They will find any and every reason possible to keep your money, if you don't cover the damage that was already done to the property, prior to the start of your lease. I really mean, include every scratch, every dent, every tiny stain on the carpet, etc.
- Mentioned before, try to find other friends you can get a joint space with. It may be easier to move somewhere close by in the beginning (even if you're paying more) before seeking a more permanent place that's more reasonably priced. Make use of Facebook marketplace as much as possible. Stay on the tram line if you can and if you don't want to get a car.
- Always keep checking on social media platforms, rental apps, and university websites.
- I would stay on campus the first year, and then look for a private rental property in 2nd year. Securing a rental unit can be stressful especially since you don't know the city that well.
- Start EARLY, hire someone online through air tasker to look at units for you. Most need to be seen in person before getting on application list. It's better to pay a month without living in the place than relying on AirBnB for a few days since they're so expensive.

ADVICE ABOUT WORKING WHILE STUDYING

Time Management is Crucial

- Prioritize schoolwork over your job, if that starts becoming an issue then try to find a less demanding job or work less hours.
- Schedule out a daily and weekly to do list.
- Find a job with extremely flexible hours because your weekly/semesterly schedule will constantly change.
- Find a job with a boss that is very considerate of your schedule and schedules you on your availability.

Look for Jobs in Your Field

- If your program is really busy and want to work, it's a good idea that your job has something to do with your program.
- If in vet med, find a weekend job at a vet clinic, scheduling your own hours via dog walking/sitting
- A lot of 4th years work as dental assistants and give up their jobs to first years if you reach out to them. In terms of handling a job, just know what your priorities are; don't put too much on your plate. (Melbourne Dental Student)

Tips for Finding a Job

- It is easy to find a job, depending on the field you like to apply for. There are MANY places to work so make sure it works for you.
- There are lots of barista jobs.
- Create a LinkedIn account!
- It's much easier to find jobs in the suburbs than in the city.
- Ask friends if the place they work at is hiring.
- A lot of companies are looking for casual workers, meaning there are very few requirements to minimum hours worked per week. This is convenient for around exam times when you will not be able to work. Remember that employers need you more than you need them, and to prioritize yourself first.

How the Australian Job Market Differs from the Canadian Job Market

- Working on the weekends you generally make more money and gives you your evenings free for uni work/to stay at the library.
- Work as early and often as you can, as minimum wage is much higher here than in Canada.
- It can be a process to get HR to sign papers.

JOBS CURRENT STUDENTS HAVE

CHIROPRACTIC

- Fishbowl (health food store) and at a spin studio making $29/hour. I work a lot and am trying best to balance it with school but need the money.

DENTISTRY

- Bupa Dental as a dental assistant.
- Dental assistant.
- Dental assistant roughly 8-12 hours per week, 30/hour.
- I work about 10 hours a week as a dental assistant. In first year there's a lot of time so you get to learn a lot more by working at a dental clinic.
- I work around 18-26 hours a week as a dental assistant and I'm making $25 an hour.
- I work as a cardiologist technician and work with Gold Coast Hospital's Principal Cardiology Professor.
- I work as a dental assistant. Highly recommend, accompanies studies very well and you learn so much more about working in a clinic.
- I work for 30 an hour part time as a clinical assistant at an orthodontics clinic.
- I work in a mobile dental clinic as a dental assistant, I work the maximum hours the student visa allows, which is 40 a fortnight. My wage is above average at approximately 28$/hr.
- I work on campus and I make $25 an hour doing casual cleaning of the buildings. Casual hours are inconsistent I am mostly on call.
- I'm a dental assistant.
- Part-time work as a dental assistant, around 8 hours a week. Hourly wage is $28.
- Retail, 10-15 hrs weekly.

LAW

- Flower Power Garden Centre, 4-12 hours per week, a little above minimum wage.
- I volunteer 1 day a week for Australian work experience and to figure out what area I want to work in. If you're doing full time professional school with a full load it's not realistic to work more than one day a week. If you do want to work up to your visa work permit amount then try to take some intensive classes to create more time.
- I work 2-3 days a week, I have two jobs. One as a building concierge and the other as a legal assistant. The first job helps pay my bills and expenses.

- Started a job at a nonprofit. Will be working 22 hours a week. I did not work the first semester. The start of the JD program is really full on, if possible, I'd recommend waiting at least a couple of months to fine work if it's financially possible (but given the high cost of living, may not be).
- Was working at the hospitals and now working at a law firm.

MEDICINE

- I am a tennis coach.
- I work 15-20 hours per week as a cardiac technician and medical admin with a private cardiology company. The minimum wage is much better than Canada and my wage is $30 hourly.
- I work as an agency nurse.
- I work at a cafe as a barista about 12 hours on the weekends, 34$/hour with tons of flexibility for my studies and a really fun team.
- I work at Little Stars Kids teaching little ones maths and English.
- I work in medical administration at Brisbane Private Hospital. I just check people in and arrange charts and answer phones and stuff. I work about 8-10 hours per week during school, and during breaks I work more like 20-40 to make money for trips and rent. I make about $28/hour.
- I'm currently working as tutor with UQ, primarily in the nursing and public health programs. I work about 3-6 hours a week for $75/hour.
- I'm working as a basketball coach for boys age 12-14. I work 3-4 hours a week at $35/hr.
- Lifeguarding at the Long Tan pool. Around 15 hours a week. About $29 AUD/hour.
- Ophthalmic technician.
- Part-time tutoring.
- Research assistant with uni, 8hr/wk, $70k pro rata.
- Scribe at a clinic, around 8-15 hours weekly.
- Teacher at Matrix Education (private tutoring company), I teach groups of students (up to 15) science & math. 3hrs on Sundays. $65AUD per hour, requires experience + a completed degree or two depending.
- Tutor kids back home in Canada.
- Work remotely for a Canadian company from Australia. About 8 hours a week.

OCCUPATIONAL THERAPY

- I work as a waitress at a restaurant in Burleigh Heads - wage $30/h. (Bond University student.)

OTHER

- I work at a local fancy cafe in my suburb where I work between 1 - 3 days a week. I get paid $26 on the weekdays and $30 on the weekends which is incredible and plenty to fuel my activities. I love my job I get to make fresh juices and drinks and help out on the floor clearing tables and taking orders.
- I work at a non-for-profit communication job.
- I work for alumni relations at UQ, 3-9 hours per week.
- I work in hospitality.

PHYSIOTHERAPY

- Around half if not more of the physio cohort here is a sports trainer. I work around 5 hours a week during the footy season for $30/hour. I also work in retail for $31/hour. (University of Melbourne student.)
- Clothing store - retail, 18-24hrs/week, about $35/hr, more on weekends!
- Dog/house sitting 1-2/week, $40 a stay.
- I got my sports trainer certification and worked sporting events at my university for several months. I then decided to get my Pilates certification and am about to start a job that pays way better and is great as a physio student to apply my skills. Lots of people in the program work, and it helps pay for things like trips to different cities and travel!
- I work 2 jobs bartending which I have lots of experience in. I love it and I make normal level 2 hospitality rates. I work too many hours a week (some people say) but I love it.
- I work as a receptionist at a physio clinic nearby. I work approximately 6-10 hours per week, 1 or two shifts per week.
- I work as a sports trainer with an Australian football team as well as a receptionist at a physiotherapy clinic. I try to work 8 hours a week as I like to spend the rest of the time focusing on my studies. I make $30/hr.
- Part-time soccer coach. Work 5 hours a week. $28/hour.
- Working at a cafe 2x per week.

PUBLIC HEALTH

- I work as a teacher! I work 24 hours a week.

SPEECH PATHOLOGY

- I work at Lululemon. I waited a while to start work but found that I would be able to manage it with school. I work around 10-15 hours per week.
- I work in retail. I work about 10 hours a week. My wage is $31 an hour.
- Woolworths, night fill, 24 hours a week, $24 an hour

VET

- Got a job after completing uni placement. Very applicable to course content (working with animals) work once a week. Very flexible. Aus min wage is much better than Canada.
- I work at a local pet supply shop (UpMarket Pets). They have two locations. Staff are lovely and I make a bit above minimum wage. I work one shift a week during the semester and scrape together as many hours as they can give me on the holidays.
- Strike Bowling - 15h/wk - $28/h.
- Vet clinic. 4 hours a day. 2 days/week. Around $18/hour AUD.
